Every cured case is an object lesson to the rest of the county. The treatment is simple and inexpensive. Men who have been listless and languid weak in mind and in body, have become almost rejuvenated after one day spent in being rid of the disease which has so disastrously affected the South. In course of time every person in spent in being rid of the disease spent in being rid of the disease spent in being rid of the disease spent in being rid of the county will have been examined for symptoms of hookworm. Not only school children, but adults are already being brought under pressure to have themselves treated.
